X & Y SUMMARY

10/11/54
2:42 pm

[REDACTED] HOWARD SIMONS, SCIENCE NEWS SERVICE, told N. G. DYUKOV that he has a report out of the Geographical Review that indicated the Northern part of the Caspian Sea is drying up and that it has effected the fishing industry in that region. DYUKOV replied that when he studied geography he was told that it was drying up and that it was due to the hot climate in that section. DYUKOV said that there was no great effect on the fishing industry. He added that there was no present problem but merely a theoretical one for the future. SIMONS called back a few minutes later and asked if the cancellation of work on the Volga-Ural canal on the Volga River was the result of the drying up of the Caspian Sea. DYUKOV indicated that he never heard of the cancellation of this canal and repeated that the scientists do not seem to be worried about the drying up of the Sea. sow
